SUITS AGAINST A CITY

PEOPLE WHO GO TO LAW FOR DAMAGES RECEIVED FROM FALLS.

The City of New York Defends Hundreds of These Personal Claims Every Year. Few of Them Are Successful, and Then Only For Small Sums.

Thoughtlessly appears in the courts at least twice a week [illegible] damage suits brought by its citizens. Time was when the city paid out in such damages many thousands annually. The corporation counsel systematized the work of the office a few years ago and placed such damage suits in the care of a single assistant. Since that time the special knowledge in the corporation counsel's office has been considerably augmented, so that the office has a infinite acquaintance with the methods of those lawyers that bring damage suits against the city.

One result of specializing the work of the corporation counsel's office has been a marked decrease in the amount [illegible] ments against the city as the outcome of suits for damages. The whole amount of damages paid by the city in the past four years has been less than $3,000. There have been many hundred suits brought in that time, and the aggregate of damages claimed has reached $2,000,000. Only a small percentage of these suits are successful, and to few or none do the plaintiffs recover the amount claimed. The city fights nearly every case that is brought and seldom compromises a suit unless the justice of the plaintiff's case is of the plainest character.

There are many lawyers who make it their business to seek out persons who meet with accident and urge them to bring suits for damages. They look out in the corporation counsel's office that there has not yet developed a class of lawyers who make a specialty of such suits against the city, though such specialization is a tendency of the present time. When an accident of such importance to set suit into the newspapers occurs the victim of it often [illegible] counsel immediately communications somewhat in this fashion:

"We have learned of the painful and serious accident that befell you [illegible] day, and as we wish to assure you [illegible] sympathy in your affliction and to [illegible] that we are ready to do all in our power to aid you in recovering damages from the responsible parties for the wrong you have undoubtedly suffered."

The signature is that of a lawyer or a firm of lawyers making a specialty of accident cases. Surprisingly respectable names are attached to such letters, and in many instances the victim of the accident seeks the advice of some one of the lawyers that send such communications. By way of making all things sure, some lawyers have in their pay nurses and other attendants in hospitals to which persons suffering from the results of accidents are usually taken.

In a recent case 20 such agents of accident lawyers applied to see a patient at a hospital on the day following his mishap. Many hundreds of such suits are brought against the city every year, and perhaps half of those in time become to trial. The city seldom loses on first trial, and when it does usually appeals the case. The office of the corporation counsel is extremely skeptical as to the justice of such claims, and there is a strong suspicion that litigation of the kind is incited by lawyers who hope to profit by it, and that many cases are brought with full knowledge on the part of claimant and counsel that the claim is groundless. The carnival in many instances discontinued, the cases when claimants are unable or unwilling to advance money to meet preliminary expenses. Nearly all such cases are undertaken upon contingent fees, and the share of the lawyer is commonly half of the amount recovered.

Many cases arise every winter from injuries received by persons who fall upon icy pavements. The Brooklyn bridge was long the fruitful source of damage suits against the two cities, until the legislature passed last year a law making the bridge trustees responsible for such damages. The most conspicuous case of late years was that of Mary [illegible] who sued and recovered damages for injuries received on the bridge. She received a verdict for the sum amount, but on appeal the verdict was reversed. One Page received a verdict of $12,000 for injuries in an accident to a bridge train. This was cut down to $10,000 on appeal, and the city finally paid him something less.

A common ground of action in accidents caused by inequality in the paving of pavements. The streets of New York makes such inequalities inevitable, and the city solicitor's office confidently expects a considerable number of such suits every year. Many other cases grow out of broken pavements and cross walks. In these cases, should [illegible] suit is instituted by persons who [illegible] banana peels and the like. The effort of the counsel in such cases is to prove that the pavement at the scene of the accident was defective. The corporation counsel's office, however, usually manages to find some one who was present at the scene of the accident and is able to show that there was no defect in the pavement. The office keeps a watch for such accidents as are likely to result in damage suits, and as soon as a suit is begun the office sends out an agent to look up the facts in the case and especially to examine the scene of the accident. The assistant who is to represent the corporation counsel at the trial usually visits the scene of the accident and makes himself thoroughly acquainted with the conditions then prevailing.—New York Sun.

THE INTRODUCTION OF MENTHOL.

It Was Utterly Unknown in England Twenty-five Years Ago.

The medicinal use of menthol in China and Japan goes back into the dateless ages. Isolated references to its application in the east are met with here and there in the records of western travelers in those parts, but we shall probably never know the name of its discoverer or the early history of its introduction.

We do not know with absolute certainty when and by whom menthol crystals were first brought to the notice of European pharmacologists. It is said that they were first pharmacutically on the continent at long ago as the end of the last century, but if that statement is capable of proof, the drug must have fallen into oblivion shortly after its introduction, for it was certainly utterly unknown even by report to most persons in the drug trade 25 years ago. Some time about 1861 a consignment of the drug was received in London under the name of Chinese peppermint oil and possibly commented upon for its curious property of solidifying with a fall in the temperature.

To the late John Mackay of Edinburgh belongs the distinction of first having called the attention of British pharmacists to the valuable properties of menthol. He brought "po-ho oil" with him from Paris, where it was then sold in the small, red labeled Chinese bottles familiar to eastern travelers as a kind of pro-

THE SUMMER SCHOOL.

Eminent as were the instructors who presided over the first session of the Colorado Summer School, it is probable that they will be excelled by those who will be present the coming season. To a large degree this will be only a matter of quantity, for the distinguished educators who were our visitors last summer included among their number some who are not to be surpassed in their special branches. Yet though the directors of the Summer School last year did [illegible] have done so better.

Elsewhere will be found a number of facts, extracted from the preliminary circular of the school, soon to be issued, together with the opinion of one whose judgment on all matters of education and literature is authoritative. What ever local endorsement was necessary to these professors is furnished by Dr. Gregg.

The efforts of the directors of the school ought to meet with proper appreciation both from the citizens of Colorado Springs and from all students here and elsewhere. It can be no honor to Colorado Springs to be the location of a school such as this one is being made, and the city cannot fail to derive considerable benefit from it. And to students it may be safely said that no similar school in the west now offers equal attractions and advantages for summer study.

THE MINING EXHIBIT.

That Colorado should not have a creditable mining exhibit at the World's Fair is inconceivably disgraceful. There is no other State that has mineral resources equal to our own; there is none that could derive equal benefit from their creditable exposition. We have had ample time for preparation, there has been no lack of appreciation of the opportunity or of interest in the display, and the State appropriation was liberal almost to extravagance. If the mining exhibit is as poor as represented, some one is greatly to blame. But the immediate need is for action to repair the fault. Happily there is yet time for a remedy. Colorado's mining industry must be suitably represented. Afterwards there will be opportunity to fix the blame and if possible to punish those who are responsible.

COLORADO IN SUMMER.

Colorado used to be called the Switzerland of America. The title is still applicable, but it is inadequate. All that Switzerland is to Europe in the way of a health and pleasure resort, Colorado is fast becoming to the United States, but the American mountains and has important advantages in more than one respect. To begin with, the whole of Switzerland is only about one seventh as large as Colorado, and the larger area gives opportunity for a variety of climate and scenery which is not possible in the more restricted region. Furthermore the accessibility of high mountain points in Colorado is much easier than in Switzerland.

The great difference between the two is in the amount of rain and snow fall. To the heavy precipitation Switzerland owes her great glaciers, her green alpine pastures and to a degree the lovely lakes which form so characteristic a feature of her scenery. In all these respects Colorado is deficient. We have glaciers but they are scarce and diminutive; we have lakes but they are few in number and of small area, and the vegetation of our mountains from the earliest times has betrayed a deficiency which renders the name "Rocky" a characteristic one. But the same meteorological peculiarities which seem to put us at a disadvantage in one way give us abundant compensation in another. For a number of weeks of the summer most of the highest mountains of the State are free from snow, and a number of them are easily accessible on horseback. At the same time the dryness and clearness of the atmosphere operate not [illegible] towards increased healthfulness, but also greatly increase the enjoyment of the traveler. The clearer air gives added breadth to the mountain views and increases the number of days upon which they are visible, and the discomforts and dangers of storms are almost wholly removed. The Colorado tourist may start on a trip to any part of the mountain wonders with a reasonable prospect of a good day and an open view.

Another advantage of the great size of the State is the inducement it offers for long and repeated sojourns. While many of our eastern visitors become infatuated with the charms of a particular locality, there are others who prefer more variety, and who find abundant opportunity to exercise a pleasing choice for many successive years. There is hardly a resident of the State who is familiar with all its scenic attractions and it is safe to say that none of our summer visitors has exhausted its possibilities. Even along the railroads there is hardly any little town but what has its objects of interest which will repay the attention of the curious or idle, and in many remote valleys and hills there are natural wonders well worthy of the trouble necessary to reach them.

All these facts go to show that the State is in no danger of losing its attractiveness to tourists and that the number of visitors is likely to increase rather than to diminish. There is certainly no more pleasant and healthful place to spend the summer than among the Colorado mountains, and it is only necessary to continue to make this more widely known to insure an increased prosperity.

[illegible]

Wiseacres predicted that a speed of a hundred miles an hour was an impossibility on a steam railway of the ordinary pattern. The air resistance alone, it was said, would be sufficient to prevent the attainment of such high speed, and if that rate were reached, the engine would not remain on the track. It well illustrates the fault of such predictions that a regular train on the New York Central yesterday ran a mile in thirty-two seconds, or at the rate of one hundred and twelve miles an hour. Such speed is of course only possible under the most favorable conditions, and it is doubtful if there is more than one locomotive in the world by which it could be accomplished, but the record proves alike the progress of modern transportation and the foolishness of attempting to set limits to what may be accomplished by human ingenuity.

It is rather surprising that in a convention where so much emphasis was put on the declaration that no new doctrines were to be introduced, so much enthusiasm should be spent on a Woman Suffrage resolution as was done at Louisville. It may be that the occasion was felt to be somewhat informal and that the delegates were carried away by that spirit of courtesy to womankind which will, we hope, continue to be characteristic of Republican conventions. But even the spirit of courtesy did not furnish sufficient excuse for the attempt to commit the Republican party to the principle of equal suffrage, a doctrine which will not certainly have the approval of a majority of Republican voters, nor of a majority of the intelligent women who are Republican in their sympathies.

An engagement is announced between the Duke of York, son of the Prince of Wales, and Princess May of Teck. It will be remembered by most of our readers that this princess was engaged to the elder brother of the Prince, the Duke of Clarence, at the time of his death. The chief interest that attaches to the engagement outside of the romance of the affair, is that a princess may be a charming young lady who is very popular in England, and the engagement is thought to strengthen the hold of the present dynasty on the affections of the English people.

The convention of the Republican league clubs came very near making a serious blunder yesterday. A resolution eulogizing James G. Blaine somehow became entangled with a quarrel about a minor matter, and might have been slighted if attention had not been called to the danger by a California delegate. Whatever diversity of opinion existed in the [illegible] before his death, there is no one now who is not ready to admit that he was one of the greatest of the party's leaders, and to give him credit for all his eminent services.

An immediate effect of the financial controversy is bound to be a rapid development in the gold mining industry of Colorado and the other Rocky Mountain States. Already there is to be noticed a turning of the public attention towards such gold mining camps as Cripple Creek in preference to those whose only product is silver, and it is the gold stocks which are now the favorites for speculation and speculators. It is certain that the next few years will show a notable increase of the gold production.

It is true that the officers of the law have not done all their duty in regard to gambling within the limits of the county, it remains true none the less that they deserve credit for what they have done. People who claim that gambling goes on unhindered in Colorado Springs should make complaint to the proper authorities. Loose assertions unaccompanied by proof are unworthy of attention.

Just publication is shown in the State papers over the destruction of fish by giant powder in various streams. The fish and deer belong to the people of the State and unfair appropriation of them to individual use is stealing and of a mean kind. A reputation for good fishing is one of the most attractive resources a locality can possess, and all of its residents are interested in its preservation.

Hon. H. H. Eddy has been secured as the speaker for Memorial day. The committee having the matter in charge are fortunate in their selection and we have no doubt that the speech will be worthy of the occasion.

There are a couple of Tennessee editors who are very anxious to kill each other. But they will not do so. It is not necessary. Their notoriety is secured by being anxious.

TOUR OF THE WORLD.

AN INTERESTING SHOW IN FACT AS WELL AS NAME.

How the Nations of the Earth Are Arrayed Along Columbus Avenue—Seventeen Countries Have Erected Their Own Buildings—Among the Foreign Villages and Curiosities.

World's Fair, May 10.—[Special.]—A visit to the exposition is like a tour of the world. Not only are the nations of the earth here, but they are here with their best foot forward. They show the best they have and to the best advantage. Not content with the products of their soil and looms, their workshops and fisheries, their mines and quarries, they show native life and architecture in whole villages taken bodily to the edge of the water and dropped down here at Jackson park. They display not only the houses, temples and goods of all nations, but their men and women as well. It may be said that a week at the fair is as good as six months spent in a voyage round the world. In fact, the odds both in point of interest and education are in favor of the fair.

It is perhaps too early to say which of the foreign countries has made the best showing here. One excels here and another takes the lead elsewhere. In the Krupp main building the Germans are clearly in the superiority in the beauty of their display if not in its solid worth. Such an imposing and artistic front as that presented by the German spielhaus with its marble columns, its iron gates, its bronze warriors, its magnificent tapestry and hangings for the exterior, and the gorgeous interior ablaze with paintings, statuary and mural decorations of all sorts, was perhaps never before seen in an exposition. Good judges say that this German pavilion beats all records, and that even the French, who are held by all who have a beautiful structure now just finished, admit their defeat. They have been outdone by their rivals from the other side of the Rhine.

In considering what the nations of the earth have done at this exposition one naturally turns first to the displays inside in the main building. Here he finds the foreigners occupying the principal positions of honor, as he passes their stations as guests of America. The centre of the large building, by whose massive gray ribs the visitor day by day, is a clock tower as high as a tall human, even [illegible] called Columbus, and runs under the supporting foundations of this tower and also [illegible] of the avenue may be seen the structures and the exhibits of the principal foreign countries. Germany, already lionized as having the most notable exhibit, occupies the northwest corner, and its pair of monumental towers, almost as high as the clock structure itself, and surmounted by the golden eagles, attract attention from a great distance. In the back ground, still higher, stands the bronze German warrior, like a sentinel on the mountain top guarding the valley beneath, in which industry and art are showing their perfections and accomplishments.

[illegible] occupying the southwestern corner, is Great Britain. The display at first sight is not impressive, because there are no great towering structures, and the massive castle and the [illegible] of quiet conservatism solidity and elegance in the modest pavilions erected principally by firms. There are many beautiful vases within the English section, and the whole will well repay a day's inspection. The most worthy structure here is the reproduction of the splendid banqueting room of famous Hatfield hall, Hertfordshire. Beyond Great Britain are the displays of Canada, Denmark, Italy, Brazil and Spain.

Facing Great Britain next to the central tower, and on the opposite side of Columbus avenue, stands the white, marble like structure of France. It is a copy of one of the famous facades at Versailles and has a splendid arch [illegible] feet across. Within are wares and fabrics for which the French are famous, with a profusion of tapestry, of decorative work, of paintings and statuary. Beyond France is the tasteful and light colonnade erected by Belgium, one of the prettiest structures in the building. Here are about the finest specimens of the potter's glorious art to be found in the whole exposition. Beyond Belgium are Russia and Norway, who are late in getting their works on the ground.

If one takes up position in the great clock tower, where the building is divided [illegible] him the nations of the earth. In addition to those already mentioned, the colony of Austria, Japan, Jamaica, India, New South Wales, Switzerland, Mexico, Persia and others are within plain view. Not only the goods and wares of these countries, but their officials, merchants, and artisans are at hand to lend color and help interest to the fascinating scene. The foreign displays occupy the frontage on Columbus avenue and the open space at the clock tower throughout three quarters of the building. The remaining quarter, the northeast, is occupied by the exhibits of the United States. Here there is no national tower or pavilion, no characteristic device, and by the side of the spectacular German display, which it faces, our showing seems rather simple and plain. But this is only the impression at first glance. Careful scrutiny reveals structures as dignified and [illegible] as those which, should in a manner compete with the more costly structures of Germany on the west and France on the south, we are not so far behind. Prettier displays than those made by the New York firms who occupy the east of honor for the United States, Tiffany and the Gorham company, it is impossible to find among the efforts of firms or individuals. As a rule, however, the American exhibits are not so well installed as those of foreign exhibitors. While there are notable exceptions, the average of taste and impressiveness in the manner of display is below that of our friends from across the sea.

One of the humblest displays among the foreign section is that of Switzerland, where the products of the little mountain republic are exposed on the floor of a [illegible] by a [illegible] of the ceiling, trifling by preserving the illusion that here is Switzerland, with her homes and her industries, and there the mountains towering over the peaceful valleys. One may almost imagine himself among the Alps.

It is not alone in the main building that one is impressed with the fact that foreign governments are making a great effort at this exposition. All over the grounds, in almost every department, the handiwork of our world-cousins is seen. Omitting the vast sums which foreign private exhibitors have spent here, a compilation just made by the managers of the fair shows that foreign governments appropriated more than $3,000,000 for the purposes of this exposition. Inasmuch as the grand total of expenditures in the whole enterprise by the Chicago corporation, by the national government, by the various states and by foreign governments is a little more than $23,000,000, it will be seen that the foreign governments have furnished more than one-fifth of the entire capital. This fact indicates more emphatically than any description can depict the prominent part taken by the people of Europe, Asia, Africa and South America.

[illegible] and interesting structures are to be found in the grounds than those erected by the chief European and other nations. Seventeen nations in all have their own buildings here, a few of them serving to house the entire exhibit of the country, but the most of them being simply offices, with parlors for rendezvous of their countrymen and friends, and designed as exponents of the architecture and decorations typical of the lands whence they came. All but one of these seventeen structures are massed together [illegible] the [illegible] are Great Britain, France and Germany and Spain having the choice location, facing the shores of Lake Michigan. Here as in the main exhibition hall the Germans appear to be in the lead. At least their national house is more spectacular, the walls being brilliantly ornamented with color, and the gothic windows and peaks being elaborately [illegible].

Nothing could exceed the beauty of the

and movement of the show frequented, as always, the quaintest and most picturesque of their own are Germany, Great Britain, Spain, Italy, France, Canada, Hayti, East India, Sweden, Venezuela, Turkey, Brazil, Colombia, Guatemala, Costa Rica, Ceylon and Japan. The last named stands apart from the others, occupying the prettiest spot in the whole enclosure, the wooded island which rests within the water space almost in the center of the grounds. Here the Japanese have built what is one of the greatest attractions of the fair, the Hooden palace, modeled after the famous Hoodon palace which stands near Kyoto. Every day thousands of visitors cross the bridges to see the temple and the [illegible] day the Yankees of the Land of the Rising Sun carry on a flourishing business in fan making.

As I have said, the foreign exhibits are everywhere. In the Women's building the women of Great Britain have a most interesting exhibit, in the horticultural and Agricultural halls the foreigners are almost as conspicuous relatively as they are in the great main structure, and in the Electricity and Machinery departments they are decidedly rivals for supremacy. The best display in the Mining building is made by a German house, and outside the principal departments there is no single exhibit that engages in popular interest with that of Krupp and his great gun. In the Transportation building the English show their locomotives and coaches, their switching and other devices, and the display of models of ships and steamers of [illegible] vehicles is worldwide in its scope.

But for our foreign friends the most novel and picturesque feature of the fair, the Midway plaisance, would be rather dismal. The stretch of ground is a sort of [illegible] of the forty concessions more than one-half are foreign enterprises or suggestions. Here is the tribe Cosmopolitanville. A simple list of the shows and this is the only [illegible] sufficient to indicate to the reader that if he wishes to see the world and its people without spending a thousand dollars and compassing the earth, but simply come here and spend a five-dollar note in admission fees. Here are the international beauty show, the Irish village, the German village, the Tyrolese, the Japanese bazaar, the Fiji islanders, the men from Borneo and New Zealand, the street in Cairo, with shows and mosque, the Chinese village, the Turkish bazaar, a model of St. Peters at Rome, the Dahomey village, the Laplanders, Buffalo Bill's American Indians, an Algerian temple and theater, a French cider press, a Vienna cafe, a Moorish palace, two crack military bands from the German army, and Hagenbeck's aggregation of the animals of all climes and lands will make a fitting complement of this most comprehensive [illegible] of life, industry and trade ever brought together. These are all money-making devices and an admission fee is charged to see most of the sights, but the fees are [illegible] and all the proceeds of the police control are under the management of the exposition.

Taking the exposition as a whole, the latest official figures show that fifty foreign nations and thirty-seven of their colonies are participating in one way or another. They have [illegible] made the Columbian exposition notable for the number, the richness and interesting character of the international exhibit. Not even at Paris, it is said, was the cosmopolitanism more conspicuous or picturesque.

ROBERT GRAVES.

OUR LOVING WAYS.

Baths Forbidden to Priestesses of Juno. Other Curious Customs.

Why did the Romans on return from a voyage, or even from a day in the country, always send a messenger to warn their wives? We do not know why no maid servant was allowed to enter a certain temple, except one, whose duty were solemnly bored to the Roman ladies. We give it up. Why the Latins took so much honour and reverence the woodpecker? Example. There was a tribe, the Picent, named from Picus, the woodpecker. No doubt the bird had been a totem or sacred tribal animal, and so he survived in the [illegible] which [illegible] gave its name to the Mexican god [illegible] speckled? He was the war god of the Aztecs, just as the woodpecker was sacred to Mars.

Well, [illegible] Roman women were white when they were in mourning. Perhaps black was too hot in summer. Mary Stuart mourned for her first husband, the French king, in white. The carrying of a bride over the threshold may be a survival of marriage by capture. She is not supposed to come willingly. This occurs even to Plutarch, who remembers the rape of the Sabines. Why did they throw good-en [illegible] over a bridge in May? This may have been a commutation of human sacrifice, but why they took out their little boys with them to dinner parties is a complete puzzle. We know that Telemachus [illegible] stayed put constantly, but then his father was abroad.

Why the Lares (brownies or household spirits) were [illegible] in dog skins we really do not know, though Mr. Jevons offers a guess. Dogs are linked up with myths of death all over the world, and the Lares were originally to have been [illegible] ral ghosts. Nor do we know why the Argives prohibited to carry their [illegible] into Argos always open, nor why the nobles wore little crescents on their shoes, nor why they buried two Greeks and two Gallicians alive in the Beast market. No doubt they had some "requisite reason," like Sir Andrew Aguecheek, for, "[illegible] them into [illegible] not what malign and mischief strange spirits." But why did the Cuthites call their lady friends "seals"? There is a question of poignant modern interest. We know not (though Mr. Jevons does) why they would not suffer their wives to grind corn or dress meat or "exercise any point of cookerie." And why would they, first month in May, a superstition surviving in Scotland? Queen Mary married Bothwell in May, and the line from Ovid deprecating the practice was applied to her.

[illegible]

June nuptial, "to get wash of dishes or trim herself," poor lady. It must have been difficult to find candidates for such a special appointment. Why they loaded [illegible] vestals alive we know not, [illegible] was to "encourage the others." Rites in the case of the vestals were performed to appease their ghosts. Why the Flamen Dialis, or priest of Jupiter, [illegible] had all sorts of laundry necessary [illegible] or more fertile [illegible] from similar restrictions laid on the [illegible] high kings. But who can guess why he might not even name a dog or a goat? He might not touch ivy or pass under a vine, and we believe he had to dumb his hair [illegible] with mud. But it does not seem that he [illegible] [illegible] clean the priestess of Juno. Mr. Jevons explains some of the Pagan's taboos, but that on the nutation [illegible] does not explain the [illegible] of Plutarch's commentators.—London News.

The Cow Blackbird and Its Eggs.

The cowbird's habit in imposing its eggs on the care of other birds, not merely fails to allow that the cow bird is perfectly able to distinguish its eggs from those of the [illegible] bird, chipping sparrow and others which differ radically in size and color from its own speckled, pear shaped eggs. The believe it often fails to distinguish its eggs from the quite often similar eggs of the chewink and even bird. And this failure accounts for its [illegible] of [illegible] and the eggs in the nest of the chewink, where there was but one egg of the owner, and again laying four eggs in an even bird's nest, which contained no eggs at all of the owner—both cases undoubtedly oversights, which resulted from [illegible] of the [illegible].

[illegible] Cow birds have been known to [illegible] to [illegible] or other small bird. Would [illegible] the limits of [illegible] exceed [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] most infected by cow birds [illegible] the species [illegible] Less only [illegible] these eggs [illegible] generally [illegible] the outside [illegible] so as [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Horn acted as toastmaster and some pleasing speeches were made by members of both lodges.

Methodist Concert.

The first concert given under the auspices of the Young Ladies Glee club of the First M. E. church took place last evening and was an entire success. Mr. P. M. Buck was musical director and everything moved very smoothly and pleasingly under his direction.

The Opera House orchestra gave two selections which were on the programme and two others which the audience demanded as encores. The Young Ladies Glee Club rendered [illegible] very nicely, with voices sweetly blending and in perfect accord. The College Hose quartet composed of Messrs. Barnes, Fields, Houck and Kennedy sang "Partin'," and the same quartet with Mr. T. Hart gave a quintet, "The Image of the Rose," pleasingly. Mr. M. O. Barnes gave a "Reverie," for the violin, by Vieuxtemps, and it deserved the hearty applause it received. Miss Gertie McClintock gave a good recitation. Mr. A. H. Dennis and Miss Lou Collins sang in costume, a pretty duet, "The Gipsy Countess." Mr. W. H. R. Stote sang a baritone solo which was perhaps not so satisfactory as his encore. The church choir of twenty-five voices gave two pleasing numbers.

Cripple Creek Gold Fields.

This camp has been wonderfully developed during the past year, so to-day there are at least fifty mines that have been and are shipping. Up to date the stamp mills and smelters and hundreds of good prospects that are pushing development work daily, so that by the time the railroads are completed into this camp many of them will doubtless be shipping properties of pay ore.

THE LARGE FRENCH STAMP MILL is now completed with all the known modern improvements for treating low grade ores successfully, and will begin operations May 1st, to stamp a hundred tons of ore per day.

The future of this camp is assured. We believe this is a good time to make profitable investments in many of the Gold Mines in and around this camp, and will take pleasure in furnishing the best information we have regarding the different properties. Call on or address

A Bad Marksman's Shot.

"I served over 12 months in the Confederate army," said Colonel Wilt Sanders, "but I could never attain any efficiency as a marksman. I only distinguished myself once, and then the feat was purely accidental. And well might one of my fellows on a big Texas prairie, not very far from a small farmhouse. We were standing at a tree, about 400 yards off, and all the boys except myself hit the trunk two or three times in succession. After I had missed it half a dozen times running some one remarked that I couldn't hit a cow which was grazing peacefully nearly half a mile to our left. I admitted that he was correct and foolishly took aim at the cow to show him how impossible it was for me to hit a mark. The next moment that cow was prancing around like a mad thing, and in less than five minutes it was dead.

"Unfortunately for me the owner of the cow saw the performance and proceeded to demand satisfaction. I never heard an explanation sound so utterly meaningless as mine must have done, and nothing but the fact that my companions threatened to shoot the irate cowboy saved me from dying with my boots on. That cow was worth about $10, but the lowest its owner would take was $60, and $80 during the war a shot, is paying a trifle too high for a sketry practice anyhow."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

ANOTHER BENEFACTION.

Following closely upon the liberal gift of $25,000 for the new Library building of Colorado College from a benefactor in Massachusetts and the conditional gift of $50,000 more from a wealthy gentleman in Illinois comes the pleasant announcement, which appears in another column, of a generous bequest of [illegible] into J. Henry Stickney of Baltimore, Md. These gifts—aggregating $150,000 in a single year from residents of [illegible] so far away from Colorado and so widely apart from each other, afford striking evidence of the reputation which our college under the leadership of President Slocum and the able faculty he has gathered about him is securing throughout the country.

The example thus set by Boston, Baltimore and Chicago should inspire to fresh and [illegible] among the liberal men of Denver, of Colorado Springs and of all Colorado, in behalf of an institution whose praises is coming to be in all the land. For this course, within our borders for which the citizens of other States are doing so much Colorado herself ought surely to do vastly more.

DYNAMITE AS ARGUMENT.

It is the tendency of modern thought, and of modern law, which is the summary of public opinion, to incline towards leniency of treatment of criminals. We all look forward to a millennium whose indications are not altogether lacking, and under its influence we incline to [illegible] rather than to punish severely. And it is perhaps the sentiment of an age of peace and good will that makes us prefer to deal with men rather than to force them into our way of thinking in the good old way. This sentiment shows itself in many different directions. Its influence is felt in the agitation against capital punishment and perhaps may also be traced in the woman suffrage movement. The political government is to be founded on reason and right, one of the chief arguments against woman suffrage would be done away with.

But to consider only signs of the times which are favorable is to take a very one-sided view of the case. Occurrences have been frequent of late which show that mankind as a whole cannot be safely trusted to bring himself into harmony with his fellow men, and that for many years to come the law must be backed up by the application of force. A striking example of this class of facts came through the telegraph dispatches [illegible] last week. Two prominent citizens of Muscatine, Iowa, who had been prosecuting saloon cases had their residences blown up by dynamite though no fatalities resulted they had a narrow escape and the houses were completely wrecked. Such an occurrence as first of all to show that universal education is not a panacea for crime and the more resources science places at the disposition of the pulse upon the more earnest must be the effort of society to prevent and punish crime and the more complete its powers for that purpose.

It makes very little difference whether a man kills his fellow with a club or with the ingenious contrivances known only to modern students. Carlyle Harris was guilty of murder as Cain and the act by which executed his act he was intelligent and cultivated which is not less to be condemned but it is very common. There are defects in our laws as they now but the right thing to do is to the laws, not to leave them un-

[illegible] session which was almost a quarrel in the Bering sea court of [illegible]. The counsel of Great Britain and United States both exhibited which, may or may not have turned, but which seemed to the breaking off of the negotiations. But it is not therefore necessary to conclude that the court of arbitration on things for lawyers to become excited in the midst of an argument, and even to abuse each other. The dignity of a high court of arbitration should save it from such a spectacle, but the importance of the case may furnish an excuse even for unusual arguments. We may be very sure that the eminent lawyers on both sides will leave nothing unused in order to influence the decision of the judges.

A great many people in Colorado Springs have come to have a very high opinion of the Broadmoor band, a reputation that was well deserved by the Hungarians. It is not impossible, however, to find an organization capable of producing music fully equal to the harmony which has of late years delighted the ears of our music lovers. There is there is therefore good reason for confidence in the announcement by the management of the Casino, that their arrangements this year are not inferior to those of past seasons in the quality of the [illegible]. The Casino's music has been a notable feature of the attractions of Colorado Springs and its loss would be greatly felt.

Indications now point to a considerable deficit this year in the grain supply of the world. In addition to unfavorable crop reports in the United States, European countries declare an unfavorable condition, and it is said that Italy alone will require over a hundred million of bushels in excess of last year's demand. Probably therefore if the American farmers do not have as much grain to sell, they will get better prices for it. [illegible] a repetition of last year's exceptionally favorable conditions when an immense crop was sold in the face of an unusual supply abroad.

Missourians are a traditionally quick-tempered people and there has probably been more quarreling in the United States over church choirs than from any other source. It is quite in keeping with the value of a World's Fair as an exhibit of the country that the chief trouble in the management so far should lay over the musical director. Mr. Thomas is one of the best known of American musicians [illegible] and [illegible] he should undertake to make himself superior to the National committee.

It was an unfortunate method of expression which led the Louisville convention to say "When the American flag covers American interests and American bonds it must never be lowered. They might at least have put honor first.

If the board of lady managers succeed in selling their souvenir quarters for one dollar apiece they will do much better than the men did. The Columbian half-dollars seem to be a drag on the market.

The Democratic party has been frequently characterized as an organized appetite for spoils. Since Mr. Cleveland spoiled its appetite what is its excuse for living.

Colorado Fruits and Flowers.

The fruit or orchard exhibition was so unlooked for a consummation in so new a State. It was a sight of the dawn of the fruit industry when the best orchards were not five years old. Indeed, some of the finest fruit was plucked when no Indians were guarded not long before. There were apples, pears, [illegible] cherries. It was too late in the year to look for berries, but they are grown in Colorado in great abundance, and the strawberries are said to be big and most delicious. The fruits I saw displayed at the fair were of large, though not Californian size. Their most remarkable quality to the eye was their gorgeous coloring—the richest and deepest I ever saw in apples. I found afterwards that all the fruit grown in the valleys of the Rockies is equally gorgeous. But of more practical import is the fact that this Colorado fruit is of delicious flavor. In Denver and in other parts of the State I tasted every product of the orchards. I cannot recall my experience in California clearly enough to say more than that they [illegible] fruit generally is far away, and so they miss there what they deserve abroad as growers of luscious fruit. I would like to encourage the Coloradans in their belief that theirs has higher flavor than the west-coast product—if it were true, and I had both kinds to prove it by, and if I could feel that I honored every fruit more than another in Colorado. The only inclination in the above were muskmelons, but as a great State for melons, particularly for watermelons. One place, Rocky Ford, in Otero county, is [illegible] for its cultivation of what is called "specialty" every year, when the idle people, tourists, and pleasure-seekers gather there from [illegible] in a great amphitheatre built for that purpose. This affair is not altogether unique. At Monument, in Douglas (?) county, the exuberant villagers dig a great trench and cook potatoes—as the Rhode Islanders do clams—for the multitude, without charge.

The wild flowers at this show were very interesting. The Denver Republican in speaking of Jack McAuliffe, who appears in the Opera House Monday evening in Duncan Harrison's new play, "The King of the Turf," says: "There may be some dispute as to the histrionic abilities of Mr. McAuliffe, there can be none as to his boxing proficiency. Unlike the other pugilists who thought they were actors, Mr. McAuliffe does not slur the boxing part in order to deliver a heroic oration or to pose for the audience. There is a sparring bout in the fourth act between him and Jim Nelson, which is by far and away the best and most realistic ever by any of the starring pugilists. Major McAuliffe's sparring partner is not a has-been down-and-out 'mug' who is a foil for the star, but a clever lover who makes things quite lively for the champion."

Leopold Jordan, the author of Roscoe Coghlan's comedy success of last year, "Dorothy's Dilemma," is in the city, representing Messrs. C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger, the well known managers of "The Soudan," "The Country Circus," the comedy "The Prodigal Father" and the great Spanish dancing sensation, Carmencita. Mr. Jordan is here to complete arrangements for the appearance of Carmencita with "The Prodigal Father" at the opera house next Saturday night, May 20.

Sunday services at the First Congregational Church at 11 a.m. The pastor, Rev. James H. Greene, D. D., will preach. There will be no service in the evening, but a union service will be held with the First Presbyterian Church at which Mr. Percy Aiken, Warden of the Mansfield College Settlement, in East London, will give an account of his work.

The Brotherhood of Grace Church Parish was organized Thursday evening by the election of Doctor Kieffer, President; H. T. Root, First Vice-President; H. S. Poley, Second Vice-President; H. Ashby, Treasurer, and John Courthaut, Secretary.

Do not forget the concert of the Colorado Springs Musical club this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the College chapel. The recital will be given by Mr. Pearce, assisted by Mrs. Campau. Tickets on sale at the door for 75 cents.

Services to-morrow at the Church of the Strangers, United Presbyterian, both morning and evening. Preaching by the pastor; themes: "No More Sea." "The Crystal River." Strangers cordially invited to be present.

Second Congregational Church, Rev. M. D. Ormes, D. D., pastor. Preaching morning and evening. In the evening Dr. Ormes will repeat the address delivered this week in Manitou on "The Church and Moral Problems of the Town."
